

What are children and young people's strengths and resources to address the climate change emergency?

Our team at the University of Melbourne is keen to talk with children and young people between 12 and 25 years old, who have experience in coping with the impacts of climate change and engaging in climate action or adaptation.

We want to invite you to participate in two workshops to develop a resource for other children and young people that can help them navigate the climate emergency and promote their wellbeing.

We are also keen to support your ideas for future projects if that is something you'd like to do.

If you're interested, please email us at phoebeq@unimelb.edu.au or marinkovick@unimelb.edu.au so we can give you further information and you can ask any questions that you have.
