

Reflective practice session

About

This PD opportunity is for professionals who are engaging with children and/or young people, for example as educators, mental health professionals, youth services workers, legal services staff or policy makers. It focuses on youth-centred work in the context of trauma and grief, from the perspective of lived experience.

The session runs for 1 to 1.5 hours (depending on availability) and is hosted online. Building on research by the University of Melbourne, it explores the story of a young person who lost their mother due to intimate partner violence. Brief videos and small group conversations make for an interactive session that stimulates reflection on our daily practice.

Presented by: Child and Community Wellbeing Unit, Centre for Health Equity, The University of Melbourne
